PREFACE

Since 1948, the U.S. Government has compiled periodically a list of fishery cooperatives in the United States. In compiling this list, the Industry Development Division of the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) appreciates the information provided by fishery cooperatives. The list is based on information collected by June 1984.

The fishery organizations or cooperatives in this publication are owned by their member fishermen and operated for their mutual benefit. Most of these cooperatives are incorporated, since this type of charter gives members the advantage of limited liability and enhances businesslike organization and operation. All fishery cooperatives, corporate or otherwise, with or without capital stock, are authorized by the Fishery Cooperative Marketing Act of 1934, as long as they are operated for the mutual benefit of the members thereof, and conform to one or all of the following requirements:

1. Each member of the association has one vote irrespective of the amount of stock or membership capital he may own therein.
2. The association's dividends on stock or membership capital does not exceed 8 percent per year.
3. The association shall not deal in the products of nonmembers in an amount greater in value than is handled for members.

No two fishery cooperatives are identical in all respects. Each cooperative was organized to solve problem(s) unique to the fishermen of a particular geographic area. Bargaining, marketing, and purchasing are the major types of fishery cooperatives activities, but cooperatives conduct combinations of these. The fishery bargaining cooperative usually negotiates the terms and conditions for the sale of fish and shellfish of its members. The marketing cooperative actually accepts the products of its members and sells them to dealers, processors, and wholesalers. This type of cooperative may furnish all the marketing facilities and services necessary to move the product from the producer to the wholesale or retail outlet. The purchasing cooperative is organized to pool members' needs for marine gear and supplies and to buy these usually at substantial savings.

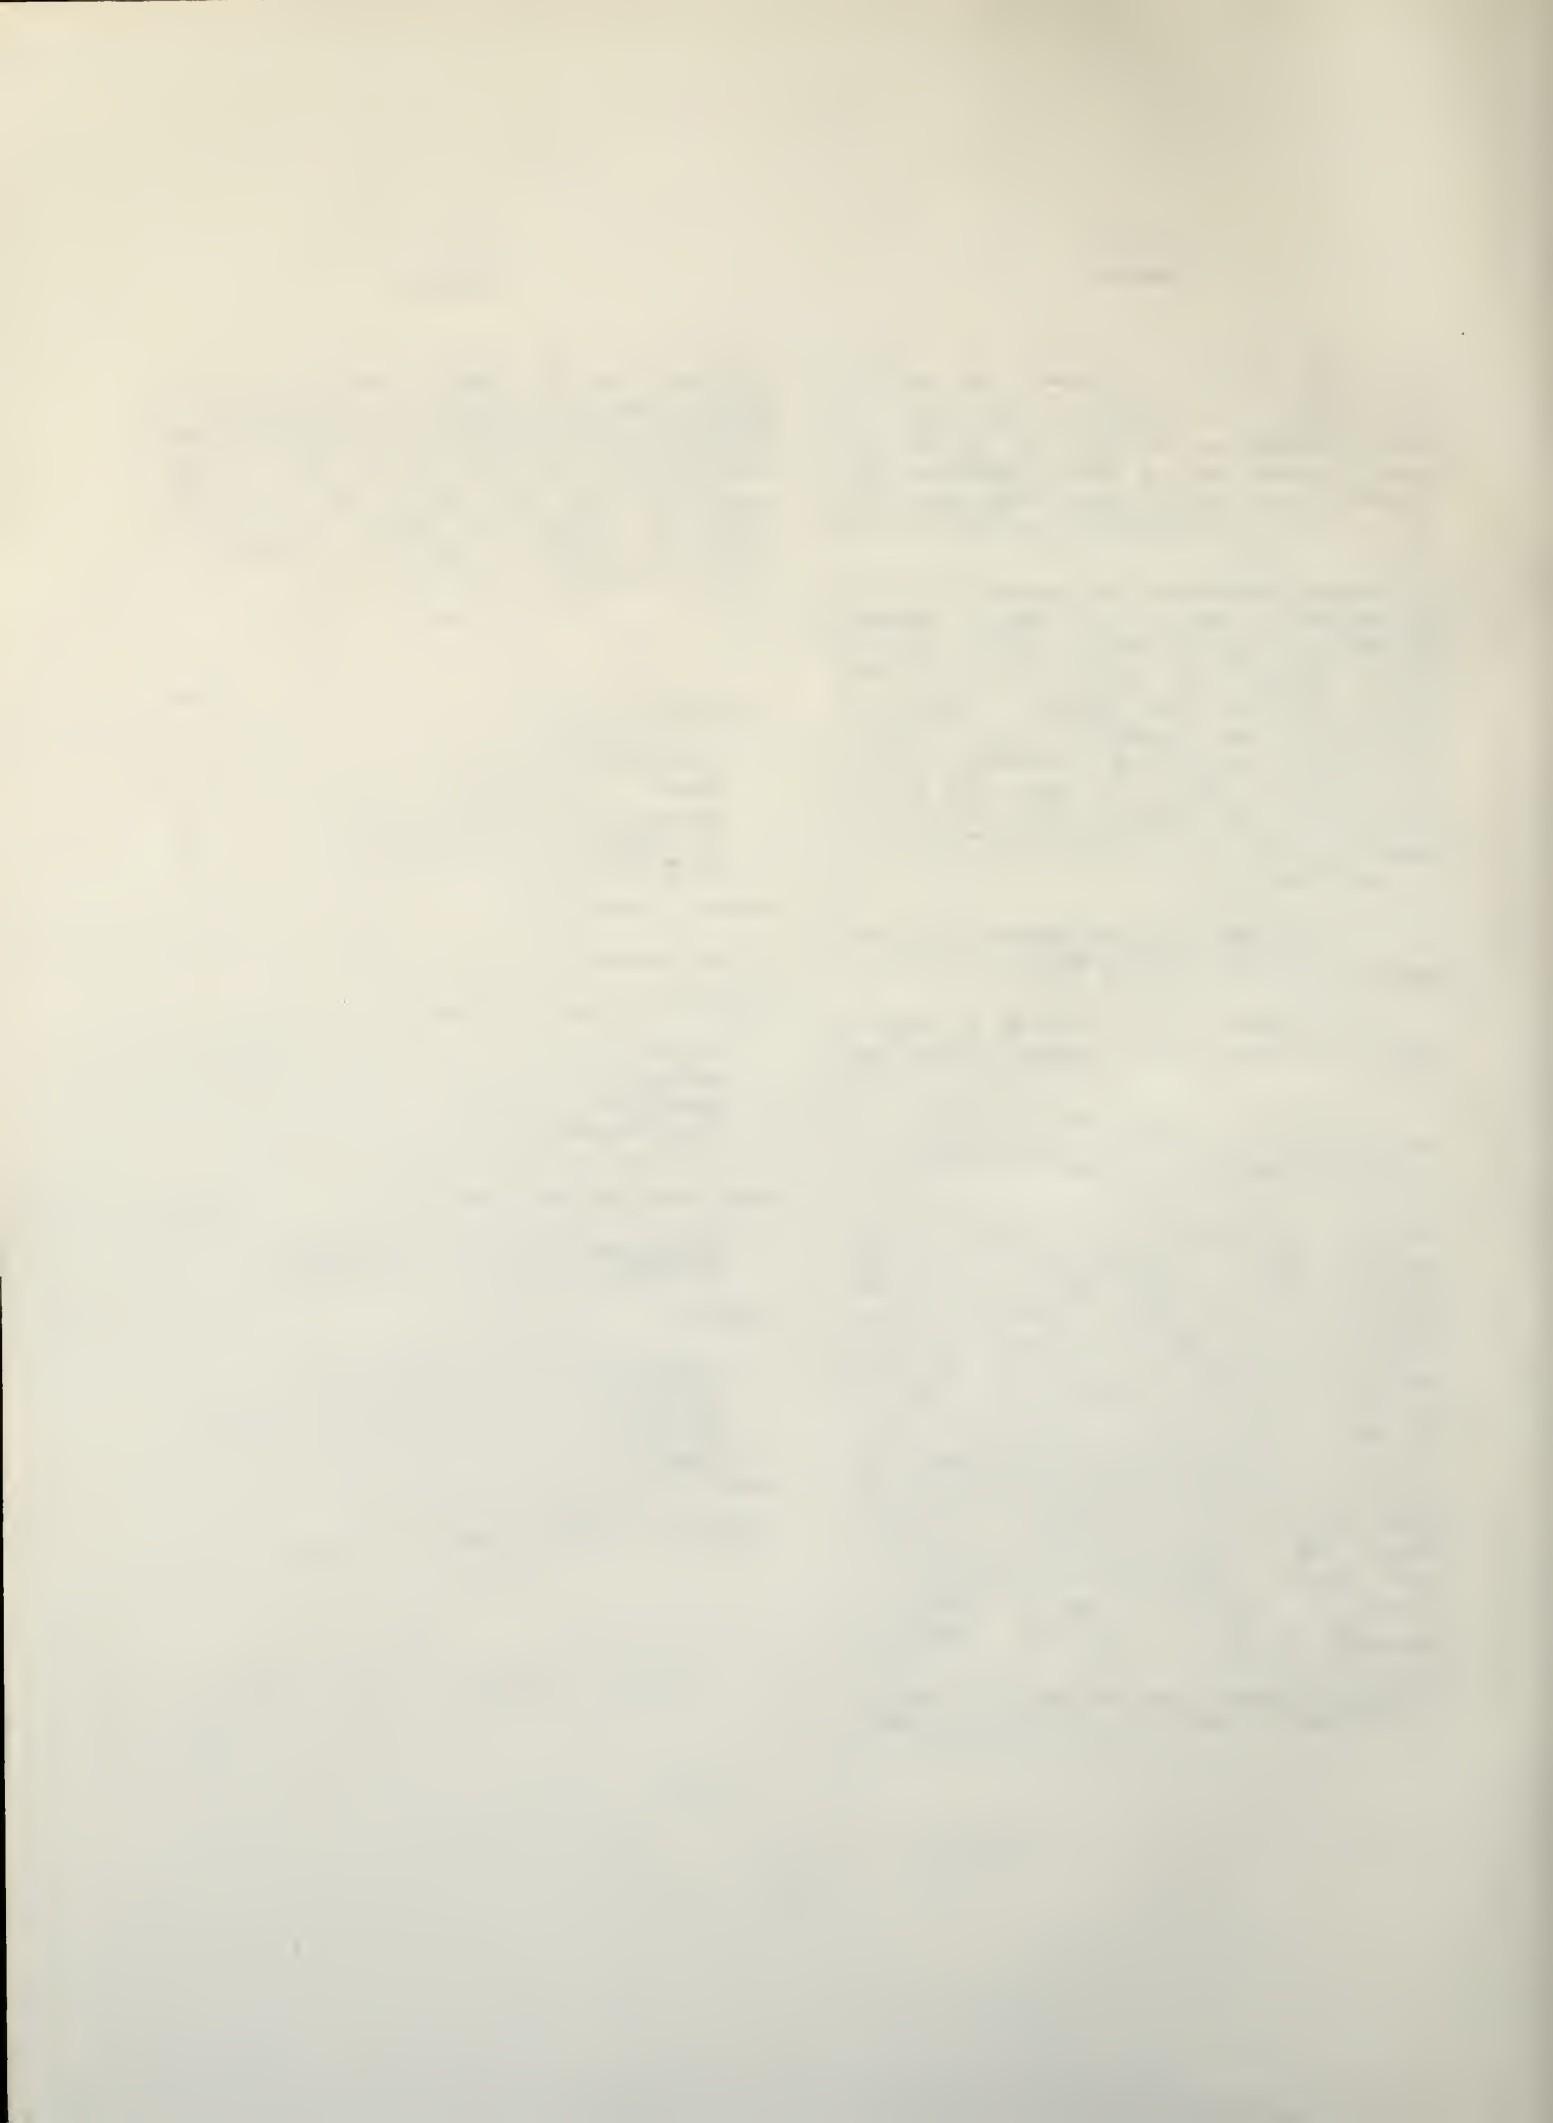

The National Marine Fisheries Service assumes no responsibility in supplying the list to inquirers.

ABSTRACT

The list has 123 fishery cooperatives in 18 States, Guam, and Puerto Rico. It is by State and includes, in most instances, the telephone number of each cooperative as well as the address and the name of one of the officers, the date when each cooperative was incorporated, the approximate number of members and boats, the type of cooperative activities, and the major species of fish and shellfish it handles.
